SUBLIMINAL is a story of one man's quest to justify his business accrument or his criminal pathology.

The story follows the rise and fall of a brilliant video game developer from a program writer to CEO of a multi-billion dollar corporation. Once he had arrived at the corner suite one minor disagreement got blown out of proportion and he almost immediately found himself out on the street.

But it only took a little proving for him to get back in the old entrepreneurial saddle and he was once again back on top as a direct competitor of his old brand, there were just one or two minor speed bumps in the way, one of which was a close friend and partner.

Once that issue was reconciled our self proclaimed entrepreneurial genius found himself caught up in canonizing his business acumen by fixing the system that took him down in the first place, the United States Federal Trade Commission.

Follow our main character as he plots and takes on the largest federal business regulatory agency in the country next to the IRS and wins by any means necessary including death and dismemberment of anyone that got in his way.
