

ABOUT THIS BOOK

A smart successful young college student is caught up in the biggest scandal of his life that could have national law enforcement policy implications. William Stone unexpectedly stumbled onto one of the biggest corporate swindles in history and is now on the run from both law enforcement, hired mobsters and one pissed off major corporate executive named Tim Robertson.

Stone knows two things; the longer he lives outside the new ghetto the more likely he will be cannibalized by the Red Death or if he is caught for willfully not testifying as a witness to a crime and withholding information in a murder investigation, his punishment could also be death or more likely life in prison.

But what concerns him most is the fact that knowing that the punishment for leaking information is only detrimental to the good image of one major corporate entity that could result in the termination of all of the members of his blood line which would include his grandmother.

Follow William Stone as he tries to survive the longest nightmare of any ones life as the unwilling witness in the Chip.
