

ABOUT THIS BOOK

The question is which should come first, similar to the old chicken or the egg, the worlds quest for colonizing Mars is based on what? If we can't get along here what would make us think that we can get along there?

The major powers of the world compete to colonize Mars but there is a problem that no one is supposed to speak of. After the first settlers began to die off, there was no thought given to disposing of the bodies so many were cremated but when the few who were buried outside the colony gates rebirth a problem no one ever expected arose.

Once these formerly dead caucuses began to regenerate and think for themselves a whole new life form began to flourish. With no place in the colony to house them, as well as no need for them, because the former persons were replaced, and their life memories were no more yet their skills remained intact. And their basic life needs, had been altered by the environment, these regenerated second life now Martians were of no use and no longer wanted around.

Follow the series of mishaps cause of earthly civilization laws and cultural differences that force these new Martians to begin to overtake the new colonist and then plot to overtake the earth itself. And see what was done to foil this plot and at what cost.
