

ABOUT THIS BOOK

"...saddled with 3 homicides in 3 weeks Marshal Bailey is running out of options when the killer himself finds out that he is marked for death as well; which opens the door for the entire NYPD system of justice to come under question..."

This 52 day multiple homicide investigation begins when the body of a young woman is found shot dead lying in the middle of the hallway to her apartment. The shot is initially determined to have come from someone standing in front of her.

Within days a second homicide is discovered within 100 feet of the dead young woman by a neighboring precinct. Her apartment building and the second crime scene are literally next door to each other adjoined by a ground floor bodega whose landlord has an easement to join the alley between the two buildings. Surprisingly a second canvassing of the young woman's neighbors results in the discovery of a third body on the roof of that same bodega.

Now we have three bodies and two investigations running in two different jurisdictions. When the third body is finally discovered and linked to the same gun as the two prior deaths Marshal Bailey is brought in.

The target of the initial murder was a black mailer who had hard evidence about a multi-million dollar court case fixing ring run by a major law firm and was bleeding the culprits dry. The partner leading the operation hired a hit man to take care of the black mailer quickly found himself looking for another cleaner to clean up the mess the first one made. That was when the investigation got interesting....
