

ABOUT THIS BOOK

Jimmy Barnett and his crew had just come together for a family reunion, on Long Island. And that was when it all started, while the 6 six relatives were in the middle of playing a friendly game of domino's, someone laid down a blanket dare, that no one could refuse.

Jimmy dared Jeffery to come up with a way to rob someone of $10,000,000.00 without anyone being killed, or anything being blown up, or anything being broken open. Matter of fact the dare was to rob someone like thieves do on the Internet, but without the use of a computer.

By the time Jeffery began to lay out his plan Rosco, Dave, Butch, Cecil and Ronnie had already come up with plans on how they would spend their share of the loot. Then when Jimmy reached in his wallet and handed Jeffery the $100 bill, he had bet him when he made the dare.

Now Jimmy could only imagine the looks on the victims faces once he told them how much they wanted, what his crew would do if they didn't pay up and how much time they had to pay up before all hell broke out, and they'd wished that they had paid up. All the victims had to do, was figure out who was behind this outlandish nightmare of a financial fraud, and how to stop them, to avoid paying the ransom. However, little did the victims know how much each wrong decision they made would cost them, compared to the amount of the ransom.

Follow Det. Byron Chrysler as he attempts to figure out "the PUZZLE."
