

ABOUT THIS BOOK

An investigation into a major charitable corporations interview process where executive candidates begin to disappear and are later found dead of various causes. Det. William Hunt follows up the case of a missing executive who was referred to this corporation for a high level position and did not return home from the interview. Even though the crime scene is in a different jurisdiction Det. Hunt vigorously pursues the resolution of the case. Along the way Hunt finds out that this was not the first missing person investigation that went cold at the board room doorstep. But when the trail of bodies starts to mount up including some that are more close to home then Hunt ever realized that is when things got interesting. There is a lot to be said about being the last person to be seen with a person alive but more interestingly is being seen with them alive shortly after their death in the case of the "INNUENDO".
